Abstract

The 20th century was called the era of the American government, and finally, after the Cold War, Russia was isolated, and the United States remained as a new power and presented its new doctrines to the world. However, the current decade of the 21st century will be considered the title of competition for world leadership and the emergence of a new international order, When Russia will attack Georgia and thus question the world's unipolarity for the first time. Under the support of two agreements, the West filed a complaint against Syria in the United Nations, one of which was about economic sanctions against Syria and the other was related to the attack on Syria. But the events in Ukraine and Taiwan will hit the fact that the world is no longer unipolar and America is not the only superpower in the world. In addition, Russia, China, India, South Africa and Brazil have become an economic bloc known as BRICS. After the Second World War, the world enjoyed relative peace, but the ongoing developments in Russia in the military sector and China in the economic sector, as well as the ongoing crisis between Ukraine and Russia, China and Taiwan, at the regional and international level. The formation of strong economic and military alliances such as BRICS and Shanghai has threatened the existing international system and relative peace, and eventually power will be transferred to Asia, so Asian states and nations should prepare themselves for this. . It absorbs power.

Keywords: Polarity and Shanghai, BRICS, Russia, China, Taiwan, Ukraine and the Asian century

OBJECTIVES

The events of the current decade of the 21st century are seen as a competition for world leadership and the emergence of a new international order, so in this game, the central powers and small countries have to preserve their identity and position. Recognition of BRICS and Shanghai, the world's most important economic and military agreements.

Understanding the Ukraine-Taiwan crisis and its future implications. Consequences of America's unpopularity, And introduction to the Asian century.

METHOD

I have studied this subject by using the library method by using the materials of the central libraries of Kabul University, Paktia University, Afghanistan Academy of Sciences, and the Ministry of Foreign Affairs, as well as the world's most reliable media such as The Guardian, New York Times., by accessing Diplomat and Spiegel archives, the materials of these media were collected using the online library method.

TOPIC VALUE

Russia's military invasion of Ukraine, the Taiwan dispute, the Shanghai Organization in the military sector, the BRICS organization in the economic sector, China and Russia's recent movements and rapid development have led to the fact that it may dominate the world after the Second World War. The current system has lost its effect, what kind of system will the world implement and how will the future of the world be? What is the importance of Taiwan to China and the West? America will be involved in a direct war, a direct confrontation between Russia and America has started.

What will be the position of the powerful forces, especially India, in the conflict between America, China and Russia? How far have BRICS and Shanghai been able to achieve their goals? This power is being transferred to Asia. Asia will soon fight as the center of economic and political gravity of the world. What should Asia do to fulfill this great responsibility properly? In the formation of new international and regional alliances, Small countries How are the location and importance, what will be the result of the war in Ukraine in the West and the East, I was forced to look at the importance of this and other similar topics to write this article and clarify the above topics, so that the nations and countries are on the same page. Aware of the international situation and will design their plans and strategies in accordance with the situation.

Introduction

After the Treaty of Westphalia, the world was divided into two parts, the northern part of the world which is now generally known as western countries of the world (America, Europe and Australia), and Second South part of the world, which includes (Asia, Africa and Latin America).

The Treaty of Westphalia makes a bed for the Western rule to rule in the world. From here western sciences, western culture, western economic and political models and ideas dominate the world. And in international relations, the models, ideas and culture of the Eastern world are ignored. In 17th and 18th centuries respectively, Spain, Portugal, and the Netherlands ruled the world as a hegemonic power and led the world. In the 19th century, British colonialism ruled the world. At the beginning of the 20th century, humanity faced two unprecedented destructive wars, which changed the direction of politics of the century. After two world wars, the leadership of the world was left to two superpowers with two opposite ideologies. The former Soviet Union remained with communist and the United States remained with liberal democracy. In addition to the political ideology, the ideologies of both sides were enough to provide fuel for the fire of war in the world. Although the second half of the 20th century is considered the era of the "Cold War", the chances and possibilities of the United States' victory in this war were high, because some researchers called the 20th century as era of American rule, so finally after this war Russia is isolated and America remains as a new power and presents new doctors to the world. But the current decade of the 21st century is seen as a competition for world leadership and the emergence of a new international order, because the Western world is no longer able to lead the world economically and politically at the international level, so this power will transfer to Asia or it will soon emerge as center of economic and political gravity of the world, that is why the 21st century is known as the Asian century. Emerging political and economic forces in this Continent or available opportunities and capabilities are what the 21st century is considered to be for Asians. For this purpose, new countries have emerged as superpowers in the world, new games and competitions have started between these new players, international superpowers and local forces, and new agreements and organizations are being established.

You will read in this article, what are the threats against the current system, are these really the last moments of this system, major challenges against the current ruling system (China, Russia, Shanghai, BRICS), and the Asian century.

1. Is the unipolar system having their last moments of life?

The year 1979 was the decisive year of the Cold War, because in this year the interests of the United States were threatened by the communists in many countries of the world, and at the same time, the Soviet Union that played role as mother of the communist ideology, Afghanistan was invaded. Thus, the American Brezhnev sky and Carter found an opportunity to take revenge on the rest of Vietnam from the Soviets.

Due to the Afghan Jihad and the support of international forces to the Afghan Mujahedin, the Soviet Union was finally defeated in Afghanistan, and its empire collapsed in 1991. In this event the cold war has ended and united state became the only superpower.

In 2001, China and Russia formed the Shanghai Organization against the unipolar system, but they did not challenge the United States until 2008 China and Russia supported the United States during the US invasion of Afghanistan, but both of them heisted again in the Iraq war.

This situation finally changed in 2008 when Russia invaded Georgia therefore questioned the unpopularity of the world for the first time has risen. Later together with China, it vetoed two Western-sponsored resolutions against Syria in the United Nations, which was about the economic sanctions against Syria, and the other one was about the invasion of Syria.

However the events of Ukraine and Taiwan have hammered the fact, that the world is no longer a polar state and America is not only the super power of the world.
Along with this, Russia, China, India, South Africa and Brazil entered into an economic block, which is called BRICS. Russia's military invasion of Ukraine confirms that the current order, ruling the world after the Second World War has lost its influence.

The war in Ukraine shocked everyone because it is the first example of an interstate war after the Second World War, except for a few cases (Iraq's invasion of Kuwait). Russia used force against Ukraine against Article 2 of the UN Charter. The representative of Russia in the United Nations Security Council justified his attack based on Article 51 of the Charter. The prohibition use of force in Article 2, Clause 4 of the Charter is not absolute; rather the charter considers the right of self-defense of those states to be protected when they are attacked or attacked by a state.

Article 51 of the Charter foresees such a situation: "If there is an armed attack on any member of the United Nations, until the Security Council takes the necessary measures to maintain international peace and security, no provision in this Charter can infringe the right of individual or group self-defense
But whether this action of Russia can really be justified on the legitimate right of self-defense or not, from the point of view of international law, self-defense must fulfill three conditions:

- Risk of attack is present or imminent.
- The actual threat may cause death in the real sense.
- The defense or Response must be relevant.

But all the available evidence shows that there was no imminent threat to Russia from Ukraine, nor did Ukraine take any provocative action for war. On the other hand, Russia claims that Ukraine committed genocide against ethnic Russians in its territory. This is a claim that has not been confirmed by any authority yet. Russia also considers its war as a "special operation", while apparently this operation has the form of a full-scale war, and Russia has used and still using all light and heavy conventional weapons, except nuclear weapons.
The crisis in Ukraine is really a great historical challenge for the United Nations and especially for the Security Council of this organization. The Security Council, which has the primary responsibility for maintaining international peace and security based on Article 24 of the Charter has failed to prevent this international crisis.

2. Challenges to the unipolar system

Since the collapse of the former Soviet Union Empire, the world has practically become unipolar with the dominance of the United States. Historical experience has shown that whenever the balance of forces in the world is lost, new unions and groups have been created, due to which heavy wars have occurred, some nations have lost their independence and some regions have been involved in deep conflicts. Although the United States is different from Nazi Germany, Fascist Italy, and militaristic Japan, and apparently has raised the flag of democracy, nevertheless, as a result of the unilateral decisions from the United States in a number of important international issues, a number of regional and international Crisis has arisen, against which new national and international organizations have been formed and are being formed.

2.1. Shanghai

Shanghai the needs and interests of China and Russia brought them together in 1996 with Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan and Tajikistan in the name of (5-Shanghai). When Uzbekistan joined this agreement in 2001, it was named Shanghai Cooperation Organization (SCO).

2.1.1. Shanghai Cooperation Organization: The current Shanghai Cooperation Organization with its six members was established in 2001. This organization created to prevent the influence of the United States and Brussels (NATO and the European Union), in coordination with the interests of Russia, China and the four former Soviet republics, At the beginning was not very important because Former Soviet republics tried to maintain neutrality and multilateral relations in their foreign policy. But when pro-Western governments were established in Ukraine, Georgia and Azerbaijan with the support of the United States, the Central Asian republics that have dictatorial system and their interests has increased with Shanghai organization.

So they reviewed their foreign policies and paved the way for the effective activities of Shanghai. The President of Uzbekistan, Islam Karimov, played a key role in this change. Although in 2001 the Shanghai Organization was apparently created for the purpose of fighting the three evils of separatism, terrorism and fundamentalism, and for economic cooperation with them, but it seems that the organization is gradually becoming more and more important for the United States. It is emerging as a threat and a rival to NATO.

Shanghai's goals are slowly expanding, in addition to the above goals, they now include peace and stability in Central Asia, strengthening the role of the United Nations, preventing the use of force without the decision of the Security Council, defending peace and stability in world, moreover talks about creating a fair international political and economic order.

It seems that the Shanghai Organization is clearly heading towards confrontation with America. The member countries of Shanghai clearly say that they want to create a new international order. The Minister of Foreign Affairs of Kazakhstan (Zhumrat Tokayev) expresses hope that the Shanghai Cooperation Organization will soon become a part of the new international order.

2.1.2. How serious is the Shanghai Organization as a competitor for the United States?

As a competitor of NATO and America: Shanghai member countries and observers which are potential candidates for membership, currently have 44% of the world's population, 18% of the military forces, 23% of the estimated oil reserves and large natural gas fields or Manages the fields.
India tried to be accepted as an observer in the Shanghai summit along with Pakistan, Mongolia and Iran and succeeded, which shows the increasing importance of this organization. The same organization rejected America's request for observer membership in 2006, while Pakistan, Mongolia, and Iran got this right in 2005. Sri Lanka, Bangladesh, and Nepal were also standing in line. Although the United States has kept itself away from a number of international and regional organizations, such as the International Criminal Court (ICC), the Human Rights Council (HRC) and... America shows serious interest to be as a part of Shanghai organization.

Along with the economic cooperation between the member countries of Shanghai, the military cooperation in the fight against terrorism, fundamentalism, separatism and drug trafficking is increasing day by day, and the organization is gradually adopting to the form of a defense agreement. It has been reported that the defense ministers of the organization will meet regularly.
In 2004 the defense ministers of Russia and China reached an agreement to hold joint military exercises in China 2005. These exercises were very big and important in which 10,000 soldiers took part. The purpose of the exercise seemed to be more important than what was apparently told to the press. The ground, air and naval forces took part in these exercises. After the exercises, Russia agreed to sell advanced bombers (TU-22 M3 Backfiredola) and (95-TU Bayerdola) to China. So for the first time China received such a continental aircraft that can launch nuclear missiles. Before this, in 2003, the member countries of Shanghai held joint military exercises in Kazakhstan. On August 4, 2007, China and Russia held anti-terrorist exercises in Moscow, which were named friendship. On August 16, the Shanghai Summit was held in Astana, the capital of Kazakhstan. The summit discussed issues such as terrorism, drug trafficking, security and joint cooperation in energy. After the meeting the participants went to Chelyabinsk of Russia to watch joint military exercises. In these military exercises, which were the biggest exercises of the Shanghai Organization, 2000 Russian soldiers, 1600 Chinese soldiers and a number of soldiers from other four member countries also participated.

From this increasing cooperation in the military sector, it is evident that the Shanghai Organization wants to be considered as a serious and strong international power. In addition to military cooperation, cooperation in the field of energy among the members of Shanghai has found great value, and the organization's main motive for establishing the organization may be the presence of rich energy reserves in the region. At the Astana summit, there was a lot of focus on the topic of energy. Leaders of two oil rich countries (Russia and Kazakhstan) Vladimir

Putin and Nursultan Nazarbayev called for extensive relations in the field of energy between the member countries. Nazarbayev said that the pipeline network between Russia, Kazakhstan, Central Asia and China can serve as a common energy market. Vladimir Putin then named such a network (Energy Club) and asked for the establishment of joint institutes in the field of trade and communication and information technology. In indirect but clear words, Putin said that: "A multi-polar world should be created so that the polar system provides equal opportunities, security and growth for all countries dealing with international and regional issues alone has no future". From my point of view if this energy club or network is established, then in fact, it will be another organization like OPEC, but with military power and the threat or in other words, it will be OPEC with a nuclear bomb which can use both weapons and energy efforts.

Iran is very interested to become a member of Shanghai and establish a Shanghai-Peak-type organization and thus be able to have a big hand in determining the price of oil and gas in the world. America is worried about these efforts of Iran. Former US Defense Minister Donald Rumsfeld once said that it is very strange for me to bring a person who is the leading terrorist country in the world to the organization that considers the fight against terrorism as its main goal.

On the other hand, Iran's rich oil and gas reserves deserve special attention for the Shanghai Organization. Iran has the second largest gas reserves after Russia the fourth place in the world in terms of oil production and the second place in OPEC with 132 billion barrels of oil.

Russia is interested in giving membership to Iran in the Shanghai Organization, but China is reluctant in this regard. It is thought that Russia is very interested in the Shanghai Organization as a new block to replace Warsaw in order to prevent American influence, but China is looking at its rich energy resources and trying to do not confront with America too much. In fact the Shanghai Organization is seen as an agreement on military and economic cooperation between Russia and China, but Russia and China have conflicting goals and policies in addition to conflicts and there are also some mutual problems that make them Believing causes.

2.2. BRICS

After the Second World War, the international system was on the brink of collapse. From the United Nations, the International Monetary Fund, the IMF, and the American tape, the international economy would change from the gold system to the current system. They got veto right and took control of the world economy. Finally, after the economic crisis of the ASEAN countries, in the international economic system against the western world and especially the United States developed the BRICS organization to prevent colonialism. A decade after the Shanghai Organization, these countries created a powerful organization called the BRICS, which also opened a new international bank in front of the IMF. The BRICS that have been established with gold man Design member countries are: China, Russia, India, South Africa and Brazil, that is the reason why the name is BRICS.

There are two important but fundamental countries, China and Russia throughout history the relationship between the two countries has been affected by various problems. But after the Cold War Russia and China were absorbed in the form of the Shanghai Organization. This time, the moving reason for their coming together was the United States, the United State has been in global power and Huntington was also the United States at the same time. He had targeted China and the Islamic world for enmity, and Brezhnevski had pulled out his big chess board in order for America to remain the polar power of the world had created a magnetic ship for America in Eurasia. So Russia and China set up the Shanghai Organization at a time when America had established its new international system in this new geopolitical world after the Cold War.

Because of this Russia has given itself the authority to say that it will take charge of international affairs, and that is why China and Russia saw their own good and the destruction of America in being together. In Afghanistan the Taliban appeared on the political theater of Afghanistan so Russia and China were worried. Russia had thought about the Central Asia that was out of its hand and it still considered this region as a leased land for its interests, both countries were afraid of two things with the arrival of the Taliban: drugs and jihadi culture the two most important goals of the Shanghai Organization were chosen. This organization has two other countries in its existence which are mostly enemies and rivals: China and India. However, with the liberation of India and Mao's revolution in China the two countries had very good relations, this slogan about their friendship was also hummed with pleasure (Chinese Hindi Bahai Bahai). !! The Chinese and the Hindus are brothers to each other, but the unsuccessful incident of 1962 by Jawaharlal Nehru which ended India's war with China and damaged the relations between the two countries. That Pakistan and China became closer to each other; China and India are far from each other. Beyond this the rivalry between China and India as a regional power in the region and the geopolitical changes of the world are the other realities that they have made each other rivals. The remaining two countries, Brazil and South Africa, these two countries are the economic forces of their regions, especially Brazil, which will play an important role in the world economy and politics upcoming years.

Despite the political downfall of the United States due to the BRICS World Bank the systems built by them are now under criticism and questions. In this regard the IMF has a very bad name in the third world countries, so in these countries this international fund has been labeled as the benefit of America and our destruction. It should not be forgotten that in addition to this the criticisms by India, Brazil, Australia and other non-veto countries are increasing, that it is necessary to change the ancient design of the United Nations in a new map because this system The previous time or international order was built on reality, not on the needs of the current world. In this regard, Razali's reforms and Kofi Annan's plans are living examples of these criticisms within the United Nations. However, they are also criticized by India, Brazil, Turkey, Australia, and the Islamic world. No specific plan has been worked on in this regard, to increase the Security Council veto forces gradually and by everyone's willed to increase the number of veto and non-veto countries in the Security Council. And Russia prefers silence, but the concerns of India, Brazil, and Mexico are known because they want their seats in the Security Council. BRICS is a part of the new multipolar world, where the old black and white mentality of international affairs is zero. And he does not accept the negative game and trend, because after the incident in Georgia in 2008, Russia challenged America's new international system and the unpopularity of the world, and at that time America did not do anything about it. Now Syria and Ukraine events have also shown that the American system is the new international system and after the Cold War, the last one-polarity has ended. In the Syrian conflict, Russia and China vetoed several contracts in the United Nations and still supports Bashar al-ssad's government. In Ukraine NATO and America are still silent. Although the BRICS countries have entered into an unfamiliar and unnatural alliance, and changing the world system requires serious efforts and making the world friends, but still the members of the BRICS countries particular China and Russia have challenged the one-polarity of America and West or the events of Syria and Ukraine have proved that the world is no longer one-pole, But this organization is clearly the official license of the world's multi-polarity.

2.3. China

China Recent actions have angered the United States; rather it has made a mistake because the United States has tried in the last two decades to force countries to be friends with them or pursue their goals there through military force. It dealt a heavy blow to America and America allies in the Middle East now have turned away from US On the other hand, China wants to take advantage of economic programs as the emergence of a superpower and thus bring countries under its influence. The latest contract with Iran is 400 billion dollars for 25 years, although with the contract it will upset Russia because the main purpose of this contract is to buy energy from Iran, so Russia wanted to sell its energy to China under this contract, but then it faced problems.

On the other hand, Iran can strengthen China's support in the United Nations Security Council with this agreement. Chinese President Xi Jinping spoke on the 110th anniversary of the 1911 Chinese Revolution.
He said that the process of "national renewal" and "reconstruction" of China is continuing seriously and soon China will appear as a single and strong power in the world.

Historically, China has pursued a policy of isolation in the world for thousands of years. They had such an empire that surrounded themselves with walls and did not want to interact with the world. They ruled their own soil and nature.
With the passage of time the problem has reached to its highest level and china has isolated, as the world progressed and they stayed away from these changes. They did not work on any process of reforms for the sake of their empire. Where industrial and scientific revolutions were coming into the world, China was lying between its walls, unaware of the world. This is the reason why colonialism reached to their borders at the beginning of the 19th century. England fought two battles of Opium, after which other countries started to intervene.
Chinese historians call the 19th century from 1820 to 1920 as China's century of shame. In this century four countries of the world interfered in China's internal affairs, Russia, England, Japan and America. To get out this century of shame Mao laid the foundation of New China. Currently, the Chinese leadership uses the words of modernization and revival to describe China's progress. Their concept is that they were facing the century of shame in the China that they are telling stories of historical glory.

China thinks that four countries should be punished for their century of shame. Japan, Russia, England and the United States, Japan because of internal wars, Russia because of the subjugation of Chinese lands, England because of the Opium wars, and the United States because of the support of China's Kai-shek against the Chinese Communist Party and the 21 century due to China's main international competition. According to them, history has punished Japan and England, one of them became a victim of nuclear weapons and the other one world power ended. Russia needs for friendship at the moment and America is in the field like its main rival.

They think that this current century should determine their story with America. Both America and China have different views on world issues. The difference between the current international issues and their political philosophies against each other, the difference between the strategic games of America and China is an indication of the difference in the current strategic thinking. The US has started trying to get behind China, build alliances and bonds, shows weapons, but China has been quietly working on its plan.

China started its work from the day it was recognized by the world. They first got their freedom, then Deng Shaping started the journey from communism to Chinese socialism, then in 2013 Xi Jinping started talking about the renewal and revival of Chinese civilization. At the same time, China has started working on information and nuclear technology, military power, trade and active international politics.

China started the One Belt One Road project in 2013. The US thought that no one would be a part of china plan, but they have signed projects with 125 countries of the world. China knew that the Soviet Union was defeated in the last Cold War due to two factors, one is that the Soviet Union was isolated in international politics and the`````````````` other was the internal economy that collapsed the Soviet Union.

China has started working on these two issues for the first day. In international politics China builds blocks, but against America, they do not have much faith in the blocks. They have already stretched such a wires around the world that all the major countries of the world are economically dependent on China. To such an extent that America is taking great economic advantage of the Chinese market. If the American Boeing, MG, Ford and other companies are stopped in China, it can give huge strikes to America. Australia, Eastern Europe, South East Asia, East Asia, South Asia and many countries of the Middle East are economically dependent on China in some form or another.

The last cold war against the Soviet Union was divided between two famous and well-known blocks, one of which was the Communists and the other was the Liberal Democrats. These two blocks had no economic and military relations so they were openly hostile. At the moment, some big names in the American block like India, Japan, Australia and others are maintaining their economy on the Chinese market. India and Russia are members of Shanghai instead of NATO. Turkey, which is a member of NATO wants to become a member of Shanghai. All these countries along with America are nodding yes, but so far none of them want to kill themselves for their international hegemony.
The open conflict between China and the United States began during the time of the President of the United States, Donald Trump, when the United States imposed new taxes on Chinese imports. The world called this new war a trade war. The main reason for the trade war was that America failed in its free market economic thinking. China was benefiting from the American market so much that the Americans knew that if it remained like this the American market might soon put China under the American economy.

The US could not impose taxes on China's exports with its membership in the World Trade Organization, so it was forced to withdraw from the organization.
Later, the biggest issue in the foreign policy of Biden's election campaign was that he would stop China's development because they thought that China's development was a great threat to America's international hegemony. Biden left Afghanistan, expelled the Patriots from Saudi Arabia, settled only 900 soldiers in Syria, pushed back his Middle Eastern policy to some extent, and flexes the muscles against China.

2.3.1. America has done the following Steps to prevent China:

• The United States has a strategic security agreement with South Korea, which already has 30,000 American troops stationed in South Korea. Also in 2017 the United States installed a missile defense system called THAAD in South Korea in order to prevent the security threat from North Korea and China. In the same region on the other hand, there is Japan's donation and support, which the US has done since the time of the Marshall Plan, but at the moment insist has increased it so that Japan does not need China. Based on this strategy the United States was able to stop the advance of China towards the east.

• America created a new alliance called QUAD. The alliance was between America, India, Japan and Australia. The purpose of this agreement is that the US will provide assistance to these three countries. All of which have disputes over land and water with China in terms of security. The upcoming meeting of the Quad will be held in New York in the same month.

• America is trying to break the friendship agreement between China and Russia. For this reason, America has started practical work. The meeting between Putin and Biden was also for this purpose. The United States is trying to reduce pressure on Putin ease economic sanctions and donate him economically. America thinks that Russia will withdraw from China's friendship because of these reasons. China is also finding common ground with Russia and this game is going on but it has not clear yet where Russia is looking after its interests in this ongoing war.

• A new step to prevent China is AUKUS. According to this plan the United States and the United Kingdom will send nuclear weapons to the waters of Australia that have been lying under the sea for years and can move at a high speed to stop any activity of China from the south. In the new agreement the US was able to block the South China Sea. America is currently planning to Prevent China from several aspects. Japan and Korea in the east, Australia and Indonesia in the south, India in the west and Russia in the north is the circle that America has planned to keep China in the middle.

• Taiwan's military support; The United States and Taiwan are now working to strengthen Taiwan's defense and military system in order to stop China. America, England and Australia decided to send nuclear missiles to Australian waters of the Indo-Pacific; China realized that it should take its position on the island of Taiwan seriously.

When Taiwan is an island in the middle of the Asia Pacific, it considers itself an independent country, but its story is very controversial. The island of Taiwan has a very controversial history, which has been fought over by superpowers from time to time.

2.3.2. The importance of Taiwan to China:

• It is based on the realist thinking of the principles of international politics. If China wants to dominate international politics, it must first bring its own territory under control.

• Taiwan has the status of its own land for China, so it does not allow it to be free.

• If China leaves Taiwan as it is in the West, China's front will be closed to the South China Sea forever.

• China showed its advanced weapons around Taiwan some time ago, in response to which the United States and England decided to send nuclear missiles to Australian waters; because of the above reasons Taiwan is the red line in China.

2.3.3. The importance of Taiwan for the Western world:

- If the West wants to stop China, it should not allow China to take over Taiwan.
- If Taiwan and Hong Kong become part of China, China's share in the world's gross production will increase by 50%.

- Politically, if China controls its entire region, it will be a domino effect for America. China's influence will keep the countries of South Asia under control and America will continue to lose.

- If China unites with Taiwan and Hong Kong, it will become a big country, which will be very difficult to be stopped.

Therefore, the first decision of the profit and loss of the game will be made in Taiwan. Looking at the head of the new international game, it seems that if the matter reaches a direct conflict (there is no information yet) then the center of the war will be the areas behind and around this island.

2.4. Russia

Russia's attack on Ukraine, which was initially thought to be a cyber-attack with rapid and significant gains, is becoming slower and more complex with each passing day. Of course, there is no definitive end to this. Although this war has affected Ukraine people lives in the first step and has turned the cities and institutions of this European country into ruins. But its consequences are certainly not limited to the borders of Ukraine. Along with the political and economic effects on the countries of the region and the world, it also casts a shadow on the international ruling system.

After the collapse of the former Soviet Union, Russia's war in Ukraine means that Moscow is facing another historical test that can expand Russia to the borders of the former Soviet Union; or reduce it to the level of political isolation and economic collapse. In fact, after three decades, Russia once again rejected the relatively stable order of the international system in the hope of regaining the beauty of the 80s and America, which was thinking of playing the role of an authoritarian power. With the continuation and expansion of the crisis in Ukraine, the atmosphere of the international system is witnessing the same cold war in contemporary history. Looking at the developments during the Cold War and comparing them with the current environment surrounding the developments in Ukraine raises the idea of the beginning the Second Cold War.

2.4.1. The importance of Ukraine for Russia and the West:

- After Russia Ukraine is the second largest country in Europe.
- The geography of this country has been a secure area for Russia since 1812, which lies on the western borders of Russia.

- During the Second World War, this land played a special role in Germany's defeat, because Germany had to travel 1,600 kilometers from Ukraine to reach Moscow. One of the major factors of Germany's defeat in this war was the geography of Ukraine, which saved Russia from imminent defeat.
- If this country falls into the hands of NATO, reaching Moscow will be reduced to 400 kilometers.

- Apart from its geopolitical and geostrategic importance, Ukraine also has historical and religious significance for Moscow. Russia is considered the origin and foundation of the Orthodox Church.

- The territory of Ukraine is a security zone for Russia and joining of Ukraine in NATO can create a threat to Russia in its borders because with the joining of Ukraine to NATO Ukraine will host missiles and troops.

• From the point of view of Western geopolitical tourists: the country that controls for the heart of the world will dominate the whole world. According to the above statement, Ukraine is of high strategic and geopolitical importance for every major power in the world, especially for Russia and NATO. Many strategists believe that Russia is a global power with Ukraine, but without Ukraine. There will be nothing but regional power. Therefore, Ukraine is at the center of attention of Moscow and the West.

Strategically in the last four centuries Ukraine has worked as a defensive wall and center of Russia against the West. The wall that will collapse if Ukraine joins NATO and it will be the second wall of Russian power after the Berlin Wall. Russia's friendship with China and Latin American countries, President Putin's visit to the \ Central Asia countries, especially his visit to Iran and the tripartite meeting with the rise and Erdogan, saw the establishment of a new geopolitical system. If it became reality, this will lead to a change in the relatively stable international order and the possibility of even a full-scale war.
Finally, it can be said that the war in Ukraine will be a multi-polar world centered on small regional orders. Construction has begun in this great change facing a new change in the region.

The US has now turned the war between Russia and Ukraine and the story of China's ownership of Taiwan into two elements of a violation of the international order. The United States has entered into an agreement with two regional and international powers in two geographical areas: with Moscow in 1990 (NATO's expansion towards Eastern Europe), and with Beijing in 1979 (with One China Politics).
NATO reached the gates of Russia against the promise of Washington. Currently the eastern gate of Russia is completely under the control of NATO. The second promise has also been destroyed, but it has not been officially announced yet. In 1979, the United States recognized the one-China policy with Beijing in three joint and official declarations and severed its relations with Taiwan.
The competition for power between the superpowers is a continuing issue, which appears in the framework balance of power (defensive realism) and the achievement of the hegemonic position (offensive realism). The fact that the speed and benefits of superpowers are not at all capable of being diagnosed and controlled by international organizations, So in Pacific Asia and Eastern Europe, between the West (NATO, United States of America) and (China, Russia) over the countries. It removes the nature of competition from regionalism and makes it a trivial problem, because the existing regional mechanisms, although some of them are comprehensive, cannot control the competition of these superpowers.
The Western block under the leadership of the United States (China, Russia) sees them as fundamental and structural rivals. The meaning of the fundamental rivals is that the ideological, economic and political systems of their superpowers are different from each other, and the structural rival means that these countries compete with each other to win the first position in the world as a superpower at the international level. This is the reason why it is not easy to resolve the issues between these two.

2.5. Asian Century

According to the famous American researcher Joseph Nye, who is also the user of the term "soft power", in the twenty-first century power will move from America and West to Asia. Russia, China and Iran will be observed to reduce geopolitical influence of America.

Because it seems from the reactions of regional powers regarding the conflict between China and Taiwan and the war between Russia and Ukraine, that this competition will eventually lead to Brzezinski's alliance of Eastern powers. America's former foreign minister) made the prediction come true. Looking at the above facts that in the future the world will be practically divided into two poles with the centrality of Russia, China and America, especially the Asia Pacific, and Eastern Europe, which They will have separate political and intellectual followers, and a bipolar balance of power will be created like during the Cold War. In such circumstances, regional and international institutions will play a marginal role like during the Cold War.

This time, the world is divided into two strong blocs, East and West, because of which, after 200 years for the first time asset and military leadership will return to Asia, and the picture of the current world will change a lot. The term "Asian Century" was created in the eighties of the 20th century. It is said that the term "Asian Century" was coined in 1988 in a meeting between Chinese leader Ding Shopping and Indian Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi discussed. The continent of Asia is wider than all the continents of the world in terms of area and population. Most of the land has more natural resources, economic superpowers like China, Russia and Japan. India, Pakistan, Israel, North Korea And other countries has nuclear power. Turkey, South Korea, Singapore, Qatar, Indonesia, Malaysia and the United Arab Emirates have a good economy. There are people of every religion and some countries are dedicated to only one religion, Israel is Jewish. Iran is Shia, some are Buddhist some are communist, and some are only Islamic countries.

But most of problems in Asia are not religious or intellectual, but the majority of problems in the Asian continent are border and geographical. A study by the Asian Development Bank in 2011 states that in the middle years of the 21st century, there will be three billion Asians. Enjoy the conveniences of life that Europeans enjoy today. More than half of the world's production is done in Asia.
In 2011, the US Secretary of foreign Affairs Mrs. Hillary Clinton said: "The future of politics is decided in Asia not in Afghanistan and Iraq." Since the Democrats are in power in America, America's attention to East Asia is increasing. The main reason for the concept of "Asian Century" is that in the past decades the development of Asia in the economic field was more than the development of the rest the world.

2.5.1. Central Asia and East Asia competition ground

According to many international researchers, the six Asian countries, China India, Russia, Japan, Turkey and the Gulf countries will play an important role in the future world. They have problems with each other's, and some of them such as India and Japan are very close to America and the West due to their mutual rivalries. In addition to this, the Central Asian region which has borders with Russia, China, Iran, and Europe, and the interests of many countries are also involved in this region, and the Far East (Central Asia) will become a field of competition in the near future. Why this region will become a field of international competition, the reason is the richest natural resources of this region, the increasing energy demand of the world's economic forces and the strategic location of these regions in the world. The value of which famous British geographer Mcleander described in his theory hundred years ago stated that if someone rules these areas, then he will rule the world.

In 1998, America's nominal strategist Brezhnevski also wrote a book about this and advised America in it that it is necessary to protect America's international position, that America should protect its interests in these areas therefore the attention of the United States of America to East and Central Asia is increasing. The purpose of America's "Pivot to Asia" policy is to increase the political and military influence of this country in these parts of Asia. Before this most focus of United States politics was in the Middle East in Asia; But the American policies show that the most attack is the cold of the 20th century the war games have started. At that time, according to Truman's doctors, he spread the influence of the former Soviet Union in Asia and Europe. Now it seems from the movements of America that they are trying to prevent the progress and development of China and Russia.

In order for Asia to properly digest and manage the future international political and economic changes, it must take steps towards a broad, comprehensive and international union. International terrorist groups operating in Asian countries must be eliminated. Meetings should be held with all relevant parties from time to time, current situations should be discussed, and political leaders should be met and consulted with them. Through dialogue, the unclear points in the region will be clarified and the military presence of the West and NATO in the region and Asia will be put to an end.

In the second step, a broad awareness campaign should be launched among the general public, so that the region and the nations of this continent have prepared for the political and economic transition, so that there is a difference from the previous vision, and people can be guided in a clear and correct way. Find the ability with this the region and the Asians will be able to choose a clear political strategy and accept a policy based on moderation, border and selfish differences will be avoided and the tradition of tolerance, good life and mutual acceptance will be strengthened. Asian nations will be able to evaluate their benefits and losses, with which the regional powers may be handed over to regional neutral countries instead of a few powerful countries and the West. As a result this work will lead to putting an end to the existing problems of the region and Asian nations. The prepared region and the nation will be led in a good direction and the pride will belong to those nations who have made tireless efforts in this direction.
Thirdly, I insist on solving the problems of the region and Asia through dialogue. To solve these problems the Association of Asian countries should be established. For regional negotiations, the countries that are in the region should take the leadership of these tasks. The West is dissatisfied with the presence and has peaceful goals. In order to eliminate the differences, a code should be created by the regional and international organizations of the neutral Asian countries. Russia has resolved the crisis, the problem between Iran and Saudi Arabia, the crisis between India and Pakistan, the problem between the Arab League and Qatar, and the differences between the Korean Islands.

After these problems for the solution of small differences in the region, joint work, and the economic and political strengthening of the Greater Asian Union, it has created a strong, permanent union or organization at the Faroese level, whose charter, principles and rules must be to be signed by all Asian countries, especially sovereign countries.

Conclusion

Russia's military attack on Ukraine, the Taiwan dispute, the Shanghai Organization in the military sector, the BRICS organization in the economic sector, the recent movements and rapid development of China and Russia have led to this which may be the world after the Second World War.
The ruling order has lost its influence. From the above discussion, we can conclude that the world has become multi-dimensional at the moment, China, Russia, America and Western countries have differences and problems in many issues. In this big game there are three countries; China, Russia and America have the most influence on the foreign of all politics.

At the moment, we can say that a direct confrontation between China, Russia and America has started. The Western world is no longer able to lead the world economically and politically at the international level and the power is transferred to Asia. Asia will soon become the center of economic and political gravity of the world. If Asia has fulfilled this great responsibility properly, then it must bring peace to the region and put an end to its differences. In This regard the continent of Asia must benefit from the development of the European Union, otherwise it will not be able to bear the burden of the future of the global economy and politics, and it will suffer the fate of Africa or lose its balance in international issues. By vetoing contracts against Syria and now the events of Ukraine and Taiwan prove that the world will continue to be in the same old-model rivalry of the Cold War in the future. Russia will be with China, Japan and Western Europe will be connected with the United States; Latin American countries will be inclined towards Russia, like the Cold War and the decisive clash of these rivalries will be in the regions of Central Asia and East Asia. Americans have stepped up their efforts to support anti-Russian groups and governments against Russians in Central Asia and against China in the east. Undoubtedly, these changes will affect different parts of human life on the planet, but the wisest nations are those who manage and correctly calculate these changes and turn them into opportunities for themselves and their identity in future world order. Prove and protect your identity.
